SARAWAK AND THE BRITISH PROTECTORATE.

At the first meeting of the Supreme Council of Sarawak after the Rajah's return, it was announced that arrangements had been made with the authorities at home for the establishment of a British protectorate over the territory. The news will doubtless be received with general satisfaction, for, coming so quickly upon the heels of a similar announcement as to British North Borneo, it justifies the gratifying inference that Bruce will ere-long be endowed with the same privilege. Their increasing commercial and political importance in these days of faces of the prisoners, who sat perfectly motionless and their agita retired. The third time they advanced, and as in the first instance raised their swords as if to strike, but instead of doing so they knelt down, and said, "Tien, Tien, Tien!" They bowed and bowing towards the Chinese, they retired. He who led on in Siamese, that they avoided his order. On receiving the word, they advanced towards the prisoners more quietly than before, and when within reach, after standing for a few seconds with their swords poised in the air, proceeded to cut their heads off. The head of the man who had begged for his life was taken off first, and then the head of the other man, who was a powerful looking man, with a sleek muscular
